Workshop 2 – Exploring the Interoperability Reference Architecture

The National IT Health Board has commissioned the creation of an 'Interoperability Reference Architecture' that will guide the development of standards, processes and systems with a view to supporting the National Health IT Plan and it's goal to have (by 2014) "a core set of personal health information available electronically to them and their treatment providers regardless of the setting as they access health services". This workshop will examine the document and the 3 core "pillars" or "Architectural Building Blocks" that are required to achieve seamless interoperability.
